I Care

I care
many are suspicious they think to be cared for means the other person wants something Caring
is a logical a mother cares for her child
where is the logic behind it?
The child may not even survive to return the love showered upon it it may be insensitive enough not to bother about it.
Again that word care...
People whom you love are suspicious of your love now-a-days
love comes with a price tag: youth--by that I mean you must be of a certain age or else, your love is viewed with suspicion, bank balance--by that I mean the nature of your job and family income and property-- in short your net worth, your marketing skills-- in short you are a commodity and there's a need for brand management.

Whew!
And you thought love was that overpowering feeling which spilled from the heart think again
the next time you think you care for some one reflect on the hazards of caring and falling in love, because you'll literally fall from grace at seeing you love being dissected every single fraction of a second.
It's easy being in love and keeping that love in the innermost core of your heart it is another thing to fall in love you have every chance of bruising it and it'll bleed in pain with no one but you to nurse it.
